Stanley Cup Champion Chicago Blackhawks Arrive at O'Hare International Airport

Just hours after their thrilling overtime victory over the Philadelphia Flyers to win the Stanley Cup Finals, the Chicago Blackhawks arrived at O'Hare International Airport this morning.

The Blackhawks' plane was greeted with a water cannon salute provided by the Chicago Fire Department (CFD) Airport Operations as it taxied to Signature Flight Support around 4:15 a.m.

Media were invited and staged at O'Hare to get the first glimpse of the team and the Stanley Cup arriving in Chicago.

CFD District Chief John McNicholas, became the first person in Chicago to kiss and hold the Stanley Cup after it was presented to him by Blackhawks Captain and Playoff MVP Jonathan Toews, just moments after Toews stepped off the plane.

The City of Chicago will host a celebratory parade and rally honoring the Stanley Cup Champion Chicago Blackhawks tomorrow at 10:30 a.m. in downtown Chicago.
